GENERAL REVIEW.

J. B. HOBBS, Esq., President :

Sir,— In presenting the usual annual compilation of figures embraced in reports of this character, but little need be added in the way of explanation or remark. These figures indicate, as far as the bare statement of such statistics can do, that the past has been a fairly active year in business affairs, not only in our own city, but, so far as they apply, of the country generally; and point to our still rapid growth and development, while on every hand there are abundant evidences of the accumulation of substantial wealth, the general betterment of the masses of our people, and of national financial independence. It is quite true that in some branches of industry there has been, and still exists, more or less of stagnation and depression, but these do not seem to be of a character that should be regarded as at all alarming in contemplating the probable events of the future; but rather as the natural reaction incident to the somewhat exaggerated methods employed in prosecuting business enterprises since the sudden revival of confidence, which set in some five years since. The approaching Presidential election doubtless tends more or less to a feeling of uncertainty as to the future of business affairs. This quadrennial event seems, in late years, to be made the occasion of general apprehension that some radical governmental changes are liable to occur which may seriously interfere with the current of the pending enterprises of the people.

The financial affairs of the government— which have come to be regarded as an important factor in determining the prosperity of the business interests of the people— still continue in a most satisfactory condition; the apparently heavy burden of public debt is so rapidly melting away, and that without specially noticed inconvenience to the people, that, instead of resting on the conviction that it must be left as an unwelcome inheritance to future generations, it appears now to be a reasonable expectation that by or before the maturity of the present form of outstanding obligations it may be wholly extinguished.

The steady and sufficiently rapid accumulation of the precious metals, as money, in the country augurs well for the future stability of our financial affairs, and in this respect it must be admitted that we have progressed far beyond the expectations of the most sanguine believer in the future of American capabilities. Some apprehensions have been expressed that, with the probable early extinguishment of the national debt, the present form of circulating medium of exchanges must necessarily give way to another, which would be likely to rest upon a less secure basis; but so long as we can maintain a steady increase of actual coin, far in excess of any necessary retirement of credit paper circulation, there seems to be but little danger that the public will be inconvenienced or business crippled from that cause. While it may not be desirable that actual coin should be used to any great extent as the medium of ordinary exchanges, it must be admitted that a paper certificate issued by the government representing actual coin at rest in the Treasury of the United States, is not less secure nor in any way less desirable as the representative of money than a promise to pay by the best organized bank, however well the issues of the latter may be secured. That with prudent management a sufficient amount of coin can be accumulated in this country, within the next twenty years, to much more than replace every dollar of the present issues of credit paper, both that of the banks and of the government, admits of little doubt, and that, too, without drawing to the country a single dollar of the present reserve or of the production of other parts of the world. Such a condition of affairs would place this country at the head of the financial exchanges of the world, a position so long and so profitably held by Great Britain, and would result in untold advantages to the commercial interests of this rapidly developing country, the possibilities of whose future destinies seem to-day to be little less than incomprehensible. A very gratifying feature of the coin and bullion accumulation of the country, during the past year, is the fact that so large a proportion of it is in gold, the more desirable metal for use as money. While the balance of exports and imports of coin and bullion for the calendar year 1883 shows an excess of imports over exports of only $4,367,948, there was imported $16,008,161 more of gold than was exported, and there was exported $11,640,213 more of silver than was imported. The excess of gold importations would doubtless have been even larger but for the forced absorption by the government of about $20,000,000 worth of silver for the coinage of the so-called standard dollars, the practical effect of which is the paying out of gold for these dollars, of which the country already has more than enough.

Foreign immigration to the United States was less in 1883 than in the previous year by over 150,000, but the inflow of new settlers, foreign and from the older portions of our own country, into the newly opened territory west and northwest from this city, has been quite as active as ever. Old railway lines have been extended and new ones built to assist in developing the inviting fields lying on or within the borders of what was a wilderness but a few years since. The great Northern Pacific railway, after years of struggle and varying fortunes has at last been opened for traffic from the lakes to the Pacific Ocean, thus giving an additional line for transcontinental trade, and opening to settlement a vast territory hitherto inaccessible, much of which is represented to be rich in mineral wealth, while enormous districts, on or near the line, are especially well adapted to the raising and fattening of cattle and sheep, and even in the mountainous portions there are said to be numerous and extended valleys of surpassing fertility and easy cultivation, well calculated to support a dense population, with those climatic influences which are best adapted to the development of the highest qualities which human nature is capable of attaining. All settlement in these new portions of our country tends to the benefit and growth of our own city, and hence every phase of it is worthy our careful attention and fostering care in so far as the latter is practicable.

During the past year fully six thousand miles of new railway lines have been built in the country, a new mileage exceeded only in 1881 and 1882 by any one year since the financial revulsion of 1873. A large percentage of the new facilities afforded by these extensions and new lines tends directly to the benefit of this city; in fact, there are but few important railway lines in the country but what already have, or are seeking, direct connection with Chicago, the now recognized interior metropolis of the country. This city has but little reason to complain of depression or dullness in business; few years have witnessed greater activity in all branches of trade, and in its manufacturing industries, these latter having within the past few years become one of its greatest sources of activity; probably no year has witnessed a larger growth in numbers, wealth and commercial influence than the one just closed. Over four thousand new buildings have been erected, or are in process of completion, many of them being as fine structures of their class as can be found in the world; the aggregate cost of the building operations of the year exceeds the sum of twenty million dollars, this being very largely the investment of local capital. When it is remembered that within the past year the city turned only its fiftieth birthday, and that it is but twelve years since nearly all the business portion of it was laid in ashes, the present character and extent of its business structures, as well as its numerous palatial private residences, present matter for congratulation and a justifiable degree of pride, especially on the part of those who have never wavered in their faith in the future greatness of the city, and have watched its onward progress step by step. The mercantile trade of the city, as well as of the country generally, has been prosecuted on a narrower margin of profit than is desirable, and in some cases, owing to shrinkage in the value of stocks on hand, has doubtless resulted in but little or no net profit to merchants. Failures in general trade have not been remarkably numerous nor disastrous. Speculative ventures and some lines of manufacturing have been less fortunate; but the opening of the new year seems to give promise of more stability in all business affairs than did the closing portion of the old.

The past has been fully an average year in respect to the product of agricultural industry, although very far from being uniform in the outturn of the various crops. No state has suffered more in respect to its farm crops than Illinois; its great staples, Wheat and Corn, being far below a full return, and in addition a large portion of the Corn really produced was of exceptionally inferior quality, much of it wholly unfit for commercial purposes, rendered so by the heavy rains of October, followed by extremely cold weather freezing the ears while yet on the stalk and saturated with moisture. The same is true, but probably to a less extent, of Iowa, also a great corn-producing state. The newer portions of the West have been more favored in regard to crops, particularly the states of Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota and the rapidly developing territory of Dakota; the leading crops in these being fully up to an average. The Spring Wheat crop, which for several years previously had been of inferior quality in many sections, proved quite satisfactory in the harvest of 1883, the improvement in the quality of this grain being well illustrated in the inspections of the arrivals of it in this city. Since August 1 there have been inspected of these arrivals 17,435 car loads of the grade of No. 2 or higher, and 7,239 car loads below No. 2. For the corresponding time in 1882 there were inspected 9,025 car loads of No. 2 or higher, and 6,127 car loads below No. 2. Winter Wheat, of which a most prolific crop was grown in 1882, proved almost a failure in 1883, so far as the great winter-wheat states are concerned; the product of Illinois was only about two-fifths of that of the previous year. This was partly due to winter killing and to destructive sleet storms in the early spring; large quantities were ploughed up in the spring and the crop abandoned.

The Cotton Crop was seriously injured by the peculiarly unfavorable meteorological conditions of the season; first, the general planting was delayed by a very backward spring in the cotton-growing districts, then either excessively wet or excessively dry weather retarded the growth of the plant, so that the final outcome will probably prove to be a product of fully 900,000 bales, or about thirteen per cent, short of the large crop of 1882. Still the estimated yield is likely to be fully up to an average of late years.

European grain crops were undoubtedly inferior to those of 1882; the best estimates — and these seem to be far less reliable than are to be desired, and far less so than it would seem should be tolerated by powerful governments whose people have the deepest interest in knowing the facts — indicate a yield of wheat fully 200,000,000 bushels below the harvest of the previous year; this deficit was expected to have produced a considerable demand for our own surplus, but as yet this has not been realized. It now appears probable that the reserve left over from the previous crop was larger than usual and has gone far toward making good the diminished harvest of 1883.

In March last the German government issued a decree entirely prohibiting the importation of American pork for consumption in that country. This action professes to be based on the assumed unhealthfulness, for human consumption, of the flesh of American swine. At one time, and perhaps till now, the German authorities actually prohibited the passage through their territory (even in sealed cars), to countries beyond, of all American hog product except lard; this being perhaps the most offensive feature of their extraordinary course on this subject. A similar but earlier order of the French government, and based upon the same alleged reasons, had excluded our meats from that country also. In France this action had come to be regarded as unwise and uncalled for, and in November last the decree was rescinded by the ministry, but was immediately restored by the action of the Chamber of Deputies, and France seems now to hesitate as to what final disposition to make of the question, the supporters of the measure being encouraged by the attitude of Germany in respect to it, and by a persistent misrepresentation of the facts bearing on the subject.

The utter falsity of the alleged basis for these prohibitions is so apparent to every intelligent American at all familiar with the subject, and also to the merchants engaged in the provision trade in both France and Germany, who have from the first protested against them, that a feeling of great indignation has grown up in this country; this has found expression in a proposition pending in Congress for the enactment of retaliatory legislation on the part of our own government; this may be the best, or possibly the only effective manner to deal with a question of this sort; but if it be possible to convince these governments of their wrong, not only to us but to their own people, it would seem to be the wiser course to adopt that method of treating the subject. It is greatly to be regretted that governments controlled by so much intelligence as those of France and Germany should persist in so gross a slander on this important article of international trade as is made the basis of these decrees, but since they do it to our great injury we ought, in our own interest, even at the sacrifice of some pride in the matter, to exhaust every means to prove to them their error, assuming it to be such. Retaliation between great nations in matters purely commercial is not promising of an early return to harmony and the correction of such abuses, and it might prove, in many ways, a very vexatious and embarrassing proceeding. It is undoubtedly true that some grounds have existed upon which to base arguments in favor of the justice of those decrees. Reports, apparently reliable, have been sent from this country which tended to establish it as an admitted fact that our swine are infected with various forms of disease to a considerable extent, and that the grossest disregard of cleanliness and care are prevalent in the preparation of meats sent abroad. Our enterprising newspapers have heralded abroad statements highly derogatory, not only to the character of the animals from which these meats are made, but to the methods of handling and caring for the meats themselves. These sensational statements have been read publicly in the halls of foreign governments, with no evidence to combat them, and our friends there have been told that such was the Americans' own evidence on the subject. It is not enough that we may know these things are false, but the circumstances require that we convince the world that they are so. How we may best do this is no easy question for solution. Surely we shall gain nothing in that direction by the effort to strike back. The Administration at Washington have apparently set about measures to try to place the true character of our hog product before the world, and in furtherance of this object the President appointed, during the last autumn, a commission of gentlemen of high personal character and intelligence to make a thorough investigation of the whole subject; it is understood that at least some of the foreign representatives at Washington or their home governments were invited to participate in this investigation to the end that they might be satisfied it was honest and thorough, and that the report of the commission, whatever it might be, was borne out and supported by the facts in the case. It is to be hoped that the report of this commission, which may be expected to be submitted at an early day, will go far toward allaying any existing apprehensions in the two countries which have taken offensive action, and in all others, as to the unhealthfulness of our meats, or as to the suspicion of their being improperly handled.

A rigid and honest inspection of all meats intended for export, and also of the animals from which they are made, is most desirable; the first can be had for the asking at every point where such meats are packed or offered for sale, and in every case it ought to be demanded. As to animals, these also should be inspected by some competent and honest method, not only such as are slaughtered for the market for export or home consumption, but also those designed for export alive; the latter would doubtless be more satisfactorily done by a government appointee at the place of embarkation on shipboard. Animals for the slaughter house, especially hogs, may be properly inspected as they enter the slaughter pens or in the process of dressing; this of course is presumed to be done now in the interest of the packer, and probably sufficiently well done; but it would perhaps be more satisfactory if it could be done by a competent appointee of government, either state or national, the latter doubtless being preferable; but it is quite reasonable to suppose that such an inspection would be regarded as practically valueless, if, as has been proposed in congress, the inspector is to receive his compensation direct from the packer; the world is altogether too suspicious to confide in such an arrangement, however well and honestly the business might be conducted.

It seems to be admitted by intelligent citizens of both France and Germany that the real animus of the decrees above referred to is a desire to protect their home product against the competition of the cheaper meats of the United States. If this be really true it would seem to be the more honest method of treating the question to levy an import duty upon the article from wherever it might come; this, however, would be so plainly in the direction of increasing the cost of living and consequently necessitating a higher scale of wages to manufacturing operatives that it would be almost certain to meet the decided opposition of the manufacturing interests which both France and Germany are now especially solicitous to foster and develop in every way possible. The same spirit which appears to have prompted this action on the part of France and Germany has found sympathy in England, and no little discussion has been had there on the question of attempts by government to protect the agriculturalists of that country, by impositions or restrictions on the food supplies imported from other countries; but in England the manufacturing and commercial interests so greatly predominate that any embarrassment sought to be thrown upon them finds but little favor. England's policy of free trade in raw material and food for the manipulators of it is clearly the highest form of protection to her most important interests, those which by careful guarding have placed her in the fore-front of commercial nations.

While the course of France and Germany in respect to our hog product has been and is annoying and embarrassing to the great interests involved, it is not properly chargeable with the whole or even any considerable portion of the decline in our exports of these products, which has occurred within the past few years. The price at which we can sell any commodity very largely determines the extent of our sales; this fact is clearly demonstrated by the large increase in our exports of hog product, which set in immediately after the large decline in the Chicago market in June last. Owing to the high prices ruling in this country, based on home consumption and rather short supplies, exports of pork meat to England, where there is no prohibition and little or no prejudice against American pork, have fallen off about as much as France and Germany combined ever took from us direct.

The trade of Chicago in agricultural products during 1883 was larger in quantity handled than in the previous year, the increase being large in corn, oats, rye and barley; receipts of wheat have been less than in 1882, owing to the exceptionally large quantity of winter wheat received from the great harvest of that year.

The accompanying statements in detail of the movements of various products are somewhat less harmonious than usual, owing in part, no doubt, to the interruption of regular daily reports from several railway lines for nearly four months in the early part of the year; these were nearly all supplied at a later date, but some are still lacking, and estimates had to be resorted to to a small extent; these have been made very conservative from the best data available, but probably do not fully cover the entire movement.

My usual estimate of the value of farm products shipped from this city during the year, made with reference to values current at the times of shipment as near as possible, is as follows:

Flour and Grain (equal to 141,720,259 bushels).....	$ 90,631,000
Live Stock.....	93,208,000
Meats, Lard, Tallow and Dressed Hogs.....	116,160,000
Butter and Cheese.....	19,340,000
Wool and Hides.....	23,654,000
Seeds and Broom Corn.....	9,260,000
Miscellaneous Products.....	13,510,000
A grand total of.....	$365,763,000
Corresponding estimate for 1882.....	372,544,000
Corresponding estimate for 1881.....	340,675,000
Corresponding estimate for 1880.....	305,400,000
Corresponding estimate for 1879.....	252,152,000

The figures for 1883 would have been sensibly increased had not there been so much larger a stock of wheat left in store in the city than is usual at the close of the year.

FLOUR.

There have been no specially noticeable features in the Flour trade of the city during the past year; as in previous late years, a dull and lifeless market has been the rule. The increasing tendency to ship Flour to Great Britain instead of wheat, heretofore noted, still continues, the shipments from Atlantic Ports during 1883 being nearly 1,000,000 barrels more of Flour than in 1882, while the shipments of wheat were about 14,000,000 bushels less. During the past year valuable experiments have been made in England, touching the quality, all things considered, of Flours made from the various qualities of wheat which find their way to the mills of that country. The published report of these experiments is highly complimentary to Flours made from the hard spring and red winter varieties of wheat grown in the United States.

WHEAT.

The receipts of Wheat up to the close of July were extremely light, less, in fact, than during the corresponding time in any year since 1877. Of the aggregate receipts to August 1 — 5,225,812 bushels — only about one-quarter was from the great crop of Winter Wheat grown in 1882, less than was received from that crop in the month of July, 1882, showing a much stronger tendency on the part of growers of this grain to market it as soon after harvest as possible than is usually observable with growers of Spring Wheat. Owing to the partial failure of the crop of Winter Wheat grown in the past year, the receipts from it at this point have been very much less than for the corresponding time in 1882, and the quality of that received has been greatly inferior. A considerable percentage of the crop of Spring Wheat grown in northern Minnesota and Dakota and not used at home or by the Minneapolis Mills, has passed eastward by way of Duluth, and it is not improbable that this route will in the future command the greater portion of the eastward movement of Wheat from along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Freight rates from Duluth to Buffalo are maintained on substantially the same basis as from Chicago, and an effort will doubtless be made to secure the haul, by the railroad line first receiving it, of the longest possible distance. The aggregate receipts of Wheat in this city for the past year have been 20,364,155 bushels, or less than in 1882 by more than 2,600,000 bushels. The market throughout the year has ruled within a comparatively narrow range of prices, the extremes for No. 2 Spring Wheat being 90 cents about the middle of October, and 113½ cents about the first of June. Prices at the close of the year were not essentially different from those current at its beginning. The stock held in store has not fallen below 5,000,000 bushels and at the close is nearly 12,000,000 bushels, more than double that of a year since. There has been a marked indisposition to ship the property forward, as all other markets seemed overstocked, and prices have been maintained relatively higher here than elsewhere; speculators being willing to pay more for it than any present consuming demand would seem to warrant. The export movement has been only about two-thirds in volume that of 1882, and at the close of the year, with Red Winter and Spring Wheat about ten cents per bushel lower in England than a year since, and stocks in the markets of this country very much larger than ever before, the outlook is by no means flattering to holders.

A prominent feature in forecasting the future of supply and prices, which has grown up within the past few years, mainly in the interest of speculators, is the estimating of the probable outturn of growing crops. These estimates are supplied by the daily press and by private enterprise to a degree little short of bewilderment, and, in view of the subsequent development of facts, approaching a positive nuisance in trade; but capital is largely staked on the correctness of these guesses, with little or no knowledge as to the sources of information of their authors, or of the motive which induces their being thrust upon the public.

CORN.

The receipts of Corn at Chicago during the year have been 74,412,319 bushels, the largest in the history of the trade except in 1880 and 1881, and more than fifty per cent over those of 1882. A very large proportion of the receipts have been from Kansas and Nebraska, these two States having been favored with exceptionally fine crops in 1882, and also very much the best of any Western States in 1883. The Agricultural Department at Washington reports the yield in 1883, at 36 $\frac{7}{10}$ bushels per acre in Kansas and 36 bushels in Nebraska, while no other Western State exceeds 27½ bushels per acre, and in Illinois the yield is placed at only 25 bushels per acre. Unlike wheat, Corn has moved forward quite freely, the stocks held in store with the exception of a few weeks, about the opening of lake navigation, being far less than those of wheat, and, at the close of the year, less than at the close of 1882. Prices have ruled comparatively steady within the range of 46 cents per bushel, late in October, and 70 cents late in January. The average of the year was about 55½ cents against 70 for 1882. The average quality received in 1883 was scarcely up to that of the previous year, as indicated by the inspections, but this is fully accounted for by the large amount of poor Corn received in the closing months of the year from the crop then recently gathered. Speculative trading in this grain has been active, but, as compared with that in wheat, not as large as in 1882, when for a considerable period the greater part of the grain speculative operations centered in Corn. The effects of the various crop reports as published kept traders more or less anxious, the well known damage by frost in this and some other States especially, having the effect of restricting the trading to a very large extent. During December an active speculative movement set in, under which the longer future deliveries advanced some eight to ten cents per bushel, with very large trading: cash Corn also advanced to nearly the same extent, closing at about the highest point since early in February. The export movement was more than four-fold that of 1882, but far less than in 1881 or 1880. At the close of the year there was only a very moderate export demand, prices in England being about three shillings per quarter lower than a year previous. The export movement via New Orleans was, relatively, increased, being larger than even in 1880, when the entire exports of this grain were nearly twice those of the past year; this seems to indicate that a considerable portion of the export movement via New Orleans originated in the Southern States, as it amounts to nearly one-half the entire receipts of Corn at St. Louis.

OATS.

The receipts of Oats have been nearly 10,000,000 bushels in excess of those of 1882, aggregating 36,502,283 bushels. The increase in the production of this grain in the Western States has been very marked within the past few years, the annual receipts at Chicago having never reached 20,000,000 bushels prior to 1880, since which they have steadily and rapidly increased. The crop seems more reliable than almost any other grain in Illinois, and even in Kansas, although much further south, the yield in 1883 is reported at nearly forty bushels per acre, in Nebraska forty bushels per acre, in Dakota nearly forty-three, in Illinois thirty-six, with a product of over 100,000,000 bushels. Comparatively little of this grain is handled by the city elevators, the most being sold on track for immediate shipment to consuming points, hence quotations in store do not very clearly indicate the prices actually realized for the property sold in the market, the store price being almost uniformly less than the price paid on track. Very few rejected Oats are placed in store, although over 14,000 cars were so inspected. Prices have averaged some seven to eight cents per bushel lower than in 1882, the extreme range for cash No. 2 Oats in store being 25 cents per bushel, in September, and 43½ in March, against a range of from 30½ to 62 cents in 1882. Speculative trading in Oats has been fully up to the usual amount, but as compared with wheat and corn, it attracts but little general attention.

RYE.

The receipts of Rye have been more than double those of any previous year, aggregating 5,484,259 bushels against 1,984,516 bushels in 1882. The market has ruled remarkably steady, No. 2 in store selling within the range of 53 cents per bushel, in the first half of July, and 68 cents in January; in 1882 the range was from 55½ to 96 cents; at the close of the year the price was a trifle higher than at the opening, with more than a million bushels larger stock in Chicago. The production of Rye west of the Mississippi River seems to be attracting more attention, Kansas especially having recently taken rank among the largest producing States for this cereal. The average quality of the receipts of 1883 was exceptionally good, and far better, as indicated by the inspections, than that received the previous year.

BARLEY.

The movement of Barley has also been larger than ever before, amounting to 8,831,899 bushels, over 2,300,000 in excess of those of 1882. It is difficult to arrive at the actual selling price of Barley in the Chicago market, so large a portion of it being sold by sample at widely varying prices. Comparatively little of the Barley handled in this city finds its way to the seaboard cities, being distributed in every direction for malting purposes and local consumption. Nearly half the entire receipts were transferred from one railway to another, and of that unloaded in the city the bulk went to malt houses or private storage places; only about 160,000 bushels was shipped by lake. The inspections of over 12,000 car loads, assuming the line between No. 3 and No. 4 to have been unchanged, indicate a better average of quality than the receipts of 1882. The purely speculative trade has done but little in this grain. Considerable sales have been made for forward delivery at times, but these have been largely to consumers, and by parties who had the Barley in the country or had purchased it from producers. A very wise change was made in the grading of Barley by the State Inspection Department just prior to the incoming of the new crop; but this was delayed until so late a date that very great wrongs were inflicted on one or the other of those who had contracted to deliver and receive the product of the new crop by grade. In this particular case there was no excuse for the Commissioners acting on so important a question at so inopportune a time. Radical changes in the grading of grain should only be adopted on ample notice to the trade, and in this case such a notice was certainly not given; though, of course, the letter of the law was complied with.

LIVE STOCK AND THE PROVISION TRADE.

The receipts of Live Stock show a substantial increase in every kind of Stock except Hogs. The number of Hogs arriving at this point shows a steady falling off in each of the last four years, indicating a diminished production of animals in the Western States, as there has been at least as much decline in numbers at other points as at this. The receipts of the different classes of Stock received at the Union Stock Yards during the past five years, as stated by Mr. Geo. T. Williams, Secretary of the Stock Yards Company, together with the value of the same, were as follows:

Years.	Cattle and Calves, Number.	Hogs, Number.	Sheep, Number.	Horses, Number.	Aggregate Value.
1883.....	1,909,167	5,640,625	749,917	15,255	$201,252,772
1882.....	1,607,495	5,817,504	628,887	13,856	196,670,221
1881.....	1,547,498	6,474,844	493,624	12,909	183,007,710
1880.....	1,382,477	7,059,355	335,810	10,398	143,057,626
1879.....	1,215,732	6,448,330	325,119	10,473	114,795,834

The magnitude of the Live Stock business conducted at the Stock Yards far exceeds what a casual glance at an aggregation of figures can possibly convey a correct idea of. A constant stream of Cattle passing into these yards averaging ten per minute; of Hogs averaging thirty per minute, and of Sheep averaging four per minute for ten hours of every working day in the year is a volume of animals that would, if it could all be seen, astonish even the best posted man in the trade, and yet such an array would fall short of the actual numbers brought to this great market for sale, slaughter or distribution. In respect to the quality of the Stock handled, the improvement has been so radical within the past ten or fifteen years that an old stock man who had been absent for these years, would be as much surprised at this feature of the trade as at its vast increase in volume. The coarse, ungainly, ill conditioned steer and the slabsided, long-gearred, long-legged and long-snouted hog of former times have given place to the highest and best selected breeds of both species of animals, while the fine condition, cleanliness and gentle manners of a large percentage of all the stock give evidence of the intelligence and painstaking of those who, in the light of experience, have found it to be true economy to select and prepare their stock for the general market with a strict regard to its being of the best quality possibly attainable.

The mode of cutting, curing and disposing of meats has as radically changed as the character of the stock itself. The old-fashioned method of disposing of the whole of a carcass of beef by salting it away in a barrel has been almost entirely superseded by the process of cooking and canning it, and by the rapidly growing trade in shipping it in the carcass to consuming points in refrigerator cars, without any attempt at curing it by the use of salt. Chicago-killed fresh beef is to be found in almost every city and village in the country, and consumers are realizing that this method of transporting their meat from the West is far preferable to the former method of sending the animals alive by rail, which tends to depreciate the quality of the flesh, or by the still older method of having them "hoof it" for a thousand miles, more or less, to the slaughter houses at the East. Shipments of cattle alive have increased in a far less ratio than the receipts. In 1874 the receipts were 843,966, shipments 622,929, while in 1883 receipts were 1,878,944, shipments 966,758, this divergence between receipts and shipments having been of gradual but quite uniform growth every year of the ten. In 1864 receipts were 338,840, and shipments 253,439.

Prices of cattle during the past year have ruled much more uniform than in 1882, and on a lower average. Quotations at all times cover so wide a range that it is somewhat difficult to give an intelligent idea of values without extended explanations as to the character of the stock reported on. Prices current stated in a table herewith are intended, as far as possible, to apply to a uniform grade of stock, and are believed to fairly represent the general course of the market during the year.

There has been an active demand for Hogs throughout the year, and the quality has been better than those arriving in 1882. Prices have ruled materially lower than in 1882, the highest range of the year being in March and April, after which there was a steady decline until late in November, when prices began to stiffen, and near the close of the year had advanced nearly $1 per 100, with indications of the supply being well in. Sheep have arrived in far greater numbers than ever before, and a good share of this class of stock shows a decided improvement in quality. There were, however, many inferior animals. Prices for good to choice stock have averaged higher than in 1882, but the poorer qualities have gone pretty low, the full range in prices being remarkably wide.

There are no specially new features in the pork-packing business; the number of hogs packed here has been larger in proportion to the receipts than in 1882, a less number has been shipped alive. In packing operations a larger proportion of foreign salt has been used than in late years, at least partly owing to a low freight cost in procuring it; the government allowance of rebate of duty, paid on foreign salt used in packing meats, subsequently exported, has proved of only moderate benefit, and none but large consumers care to take the trouble incident to securing the rebate.

The market for Provisions has been subject to wider fluctuations than during 1882, but on the whole, prices have averaged lower. A general advance was maintained until near the first of July, when, on the culmination, by collapse, of large speculative operations, a heavy decline set in, which continued with but little reaction until near the close of the year. The present capacity of the packing houses for slaughtering is about 60,000 head of hogs per day, but few of these establishments are, however, ever run to their full capacity, and during the summer months a number of them are not in operation.

The export movement for the year has been somewhat larger than in 1882, and for the two years, including both Beef and Hog Product, has been as follows, in pounds:

Years.	Fresh Beef.	Salted Beef.	Pork.	Bacon and Hams.	Lard.
1883	116,928,727	46,443,037	67,759,872	423,874,985	277,034,680
1882	53,983,730	40,517,648	66,029,915	345,862,163	232,536,658

OTHER FARM PRODUCTS.

The receipts of Flax Seed have been largely short of those of 1882, mainly owing to a very much lighter crop than that of the previous year, and perhaps from better ability on the part of farmers to hold this product than heretofore. Other seeds have been in larger supply. Prices of Flax and Clover Seed have ruled higher, and Timothy lower than in 1882. The receipts of Butter show a marked increase; of Cheese about the same as the previous year. The export movement in Butter has been fully three times that of 1882, and in Cheese somewhat larger. Potatoes and other root crops have been in abundant supply, and during the last half of the year, very moderate in price, a great blessing to the poorer classes. In other products but little of note has occurred. The business conducted on South Water Street is of very great importance and of very great magnitude, but is of a character more directly affecting local consumers than the general commercial movement, although the aggregate of shipments of this class of produce to other points, many of them quite remote and in every direction, is large and increasing. The trade from its very nature is especially subject to sudden and wide fluctuations, consequent upon an excessive or diminished volume of supplies. An estimate of its volume as measured by money value is difficult to arrive at, and it can best be treated as a general aggregate rather than in detail.

LUMBER, COAL AND SALT.

The receipts of Lumber have been some two hundred million feet less than in 1882, but with that exception, larger than in any previous year. Shingles show rather an abnormal increase of receipts, the excess being left over in the shape of stock on hand at the close of the year. Prices of Lumber, by vessel cargo, have ruled considerably lower on most grades than in 1882, nevertheless manufacturers appear to be well satisfied with the result of the season's business. City dealers have had to be content with small profits, but are believed to have generally done fairly well.

The receipts of Coal show an increase of about one hundred thousand tons over those of the previous year, the increase being entirely from western coal fields. Prices of all Coals have averaged lower than in 1882, and the business has been conducted so far as local dealers are concerned, on a very small margin of profit. The bulk of the business is now conducted by agencies of great coal companies both in the East and the West, consumers securing their supplies with but little intervention of middle men. A considerable quantity of petroleum is now used by the city gas companies, reducing the consumption of Coal for that purpose.

The receipts of Salt as reported are somewhat less than the amount actually received; evidently some of the Salt received in bulk has not been reported at all, but it has been impossible to exactly locate the error in the reporting. A considerable quantity of foreign salt was received in the early months of the year, and quite a large quantity of Louisiana Salt, a new competitor in this market. Saginaw and Syracuse fine have averaged higher than in 1882, closing at one dollar and fifteen cents per barrel, or fifteen cents above the current price a year since.

DIRECT TRADE WITH EUROPE.

The shipments from Chicago to Europe on through bills of lading as reported, has been larger by about 123,000 tons than in 1882, and in addition a considerable tonnage was taken in the early part of the year of which no report was received, the line having retired from the business and its records being removed from the city. Nearly all the items in this movement show more or less of an increase, notwithstanding the restrictions which prevailed on the free exportation of hog product, a very important item in the direct exports. Fresh Beef, although largely shipped from Chicago to Europe, is not billed through from this city, and hence does not appear in the table showing the export movement.

TRANSPORTATION.

Nothing worthy of special note has occurred in respect to the transportation question during the year. One new railway line (Chicago & Atlantic) was opened for traffic eastward in the early days of the year, forming with its connection, the New York, Lake Erie & Western, a direct line to the seaboard; and late in the year the West Shore was opened from New York to its western terminus at Niagara Falls. These two lines, although not operated in connection, give increased facilities equal to an entire new railway from Chicago to New York, and practically to all seaboard cities. The increase of railway lines renders the question of maintaining agreed rates one of increased complication and difficulty, and while there has been a nominal profession of adherence to published tariffs, it was no secret, at several times during the year, and especially during its last few weeks, that but little regard was paid to the rates agreed upon by the so-called pooling arrangement.

Lake freights on grain have averaged higher than in 1882, and the larger class of vessels have been operated with fair profit to their owners. Erie canal freights have also averaged somewhat higher than the previous year, notwithstanding the entire absence of state tolls. Of the effect of the abolishment of canal tolls, the Governor of New York says: "The exhibit of canal business for the season just closed, in my judgment, fully justifies the policy adopted by the people, of relieving this commerce of the burden of tolls." The business of the canal increased to the extent of 324,350 tons, although the season was shorter by one-seventh, on account of a later opening and earlier closing, controlled by the weather, than in 1882. The transportation of grain by the canal increased from 29,430,688 bushels in 1882, to 42,350,916 bushels in 1883. The canal was maintained in good navigable condition throughout the season, but provision does not appear to exist for such extraordinary repairs as are liable to become necessary as the result of unforeseen contingencies, such as serious breaks, renewal of locks and the like.

A renewed interest has arisen in respect to the opening of a direct water way from Chicago to the Mississippi River, and the friends of that enterprise are sanguine of securing congressional aid in the undertaking at an early day. The government survey for the work, ordered by the last Congress, was most satisfactory; the report of the engineer in charge not only showing the project to be feasible and inexpensive, but also that its construction is of very great importance in the interest of both producers and consumers. The great abuses resulting from the log-rolling policy of Congress, in late years, in making appropriations for internal improvements, tend to discouraging the friends of really meritorious works, but an intelligent and persevering effort to place such before the national legislature and the people in their true light must eventually relieve them of any preconceived prejudices which have come to be more or less attached to any suggestions of national expenditure on their account.

This review having already exceeded its desired length, other subjects must be omitted. For statistics bearing upon the question of commercial movements, prices, and other matters of detail, I beg to refer to statements herewith.

I am, Mr. President,

Your obedient servant,

CHAS. RANDOLPH,

Secretary.

Chicago, January, 1884.

It will be noticed from the financial statement that the legal expenses have been unusually heavy. In explanation we would say that, at the commencement of the past year, we found some sixty suits pending in the courts, all of which involved important legal rights, both to the Board itself, and to its individual members. This Board had no other alternative but to press these suits to the final hearing, that these rights might be established beyond any question.

There were also several suits pending, resulting from an endeavor to suppress those monstrosities called "Bucket Shops." These suits have been concluded during the year, resulting in establishing the right of this Board to control its own market quotations. Under this right, now clearly defined, your Directors have entered into negotiations with the various telegraph companies, to furnish them with our market quotations, under such restrictions as will enable them to dictate where and to whom the market quotations shall be sent.

Owing to unavoidable delay these arrangements have not been concluded, but we believe that a satisfactory arrangement can be made at an early day.

Another and very important question has been determined.

We have now 1,936 members. These memberships represent a valuation of about six millions dollars. The question, whether or not these memberships were personal property, and subject to taxation or attachment as personal property, under the laws of the land, or whether they were simply privileges given by this Board, granting the holders thereof certain rights and privileges to transact business under the rules of the Board, has been determined in favor of the latter.

Had the entire sum been expended in determining this important question, a question of such vital importance to our members, it should be considered as money well invested.

This Board has also been compelled to defend other important suits, growing out of the "July (1882) Wheat deal," and others, involving the validity of our contracts for future delivery, and the right of this Board to discipline its members. All these suits have been decided in favor of the Board. These decisions involve important principles, and are greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Board of Trade.

No new suits have been commenced during the year, and the only ones pending in the courts at the present time are those brought against the Board, involving the vacation of La Salle street for the use of the Board, a suit pertaining to the construction of the new building, and one growing out of the enforcement of the commission rule.

Your Board of Directors have appropriated an additional sum of one hundred thousand dollars toward the construction of the new Board of Trade buildings, necessitating the sale of our income-paying securities, thereby reducing our annual income equal to the amount of the interest on these securities.

The total amount appropriated by this Board toward the construction of the new buildings is $240,000. It will be readily seen that, while the sale of securities necessary to make these advances deprives us of an income, it reduces the amount of bonds, on which we would have to pay interest, and as the interest on the bonds of the Board is greater than that received from our securities, this Board gains by the transaction. Besides, it affords the bondholders so much additional security, and increases the value of the bonds to the extent of these advances.

In consequence of having sold so large an amount of our income-paying securities, thereby reducing our income from that source, the necessity for providing for the interest on the bonds of the Board, until the building has been completed and rented, and to provide for the probable increase in expenses necessarily attending our removal, this directors have deemed it advisable to increase the annual dues to $30.

There has not been any increase in the membership during the year, but there has been a large change in the membership. Many new members have been admitted, taking the places of old ones retiring.

It was generally supposed that the modification of the commission rule would cause a serious decline in the value of memberships. Prices did decline for a while, from the sale of agents' memberships, but these were taken by parties who became active members, and as business increased, the demand for memberships increased correspondingly. Prices have advanced until they are now higher than they were immediately before the change in the commission rule.

With the improved prospects for business, and with the prospect of our entering into a more commodious hall during the coming year we see no reasons why our memberships should not continue to advance in value.

During the year, the rules which were found to be in a bad condition, from having been frequently modified, have been entirely revised and reprinted. Some of the old rules were repealed, and new ones adopted, under which we have been working for several months. Your directors believe that the rules as adopted and revised, have been formulated from mature experience, and are now sufficiently full and complete to meet all requirements of the trade, at least, so far, they are working admirably.

It is well known to the members of this Board, that a large amount of our trading is being done on the Call Board, an institution entirely independent of our own, and working under its own rules and regulations. It is easy to see that serious complications and difficulties are liable to arise from trading under two distinct organizations. But so far no serious difficulties have arisen.

These different systems have been tolerated more from an apparent temporary necessity, than from any manifest desire on the part of the Board to perpetuate it. This necessity has arisen from the fact that this directory have been unable to provide adequate accommodations for a Call Board. Ample accommodations are being provided in the new building to obviate any further necessity for an independent call. This directory are unanimous in their opinion then that when this Board occupies the new building, the Call should be conducted under the rules and regulations of the Board of Trade, and it believes that rules and regulations can be adopted by which the present difficulties and dangers can be avoided, and the different systems of trading so harmonized as to meet all the requirements of the trade, and be made entirely satisfactory to all interested.

Under the rules adopted at the time of their revision, this directory have established a clearing house.

The committee having the matter in charge have made frequent reports of progress, and of the workings of the institution, and this directory feel justified in saying that it has been, so far, highly successful, and meets a want which has long been felt by the trade.

The Board of Real Estate Managers have made a full and detailed statement of the finances, and the work connected with the construction of the new Board of Trade buildings. This board will only add that they believe that the managers are faithfully attending to their duties, and are pushing the work forward as rapidly as possible.

These bonds have now acquired a position in the market that seems to insure the easy and advantageous placing of all required to complete the building.

This directory take great pleasure in congratulating this Board for the great increase, and satisfactory condition of its business. There has been only one serious failure on the Board. This failure affected, seriously, nearly all the interests of the Board, but, in the general prosperity which followed, it has fully recovered from its disastrous effects, and its business to-day is in a highly satisfactory condition.

The faithful fulfillment of contracts, the equitable adjustment of all matters pertaining to our business, the just enforcement of our rules, with the manifest disposition of our members to maintain commercial honor, has enabled us to maintain our commercial pre-eminence.

This directory have great confidence in the continued advancement of all our material interests. The broad and liberal plans on which our Board is founded, and liberal plans made for the future must insure continued prosperity.

Respectfully submitted,

J. B. HOBBS, President.

NOTE.—Up to 1850 only the aggregate valuations in the several counties were reported to the State officers, and from 1852 to 1857 inclusive, a few counties returned only the aggregates; hence the details of Real Estate and Personal Property valuations are not complete for those years. In 1867 and 1868 the details of valuation are not entirely correct, owing to changes by the operation of the equalization law; since 1868 the valuations are as equalized. The total valuations in each of the several years are entirely correct and official.

The valuations for 1873 as equalized are largely in excess of any previous year. In 1874 some changes were made in the manner of equalizing the assessments, resulting in reducing all the valuations, but especially that of Railroad Property. Valuations for 1883 are but little if anything over twenty-five per cent of the cash value of the Real Estate, and even less on the Personal Property owned in the State.

The State Debt, as noted, represents it as it stood on the 1st of January in each of the several years to 1869; in 1869 and 1870, as it stood December 1; in 1871, as it stood December 31; from 1872 to 1879, as it stood December 1.

PRICES OF HIGHWINES.

The following shows the current prices or assumed value of Highwines for each week during 1883. In reality very little, if any, Highwines, as such, are now sold in the Chicago market. Prices of the various classes of the Distilled Spirits, including Alcohol, are, however, made upon the basis of a valuation for Highwines, and during the year quotations for all forms of Spirits not rectified have been based upon a valuation for Highwines, as indicated below.

NOTE.—In the above Receipts and Shipments of Lumber by Rail, the greater part is calculated on the basis of three pounds per square foot, nearly all the roads reporting by weight. This may be somewhat too high a weight per foot, as no clear calculation can be made of the proportions of dry and green lumber, but it is not sufficiently erroneous to account for the Lumber reported received after allowing liberally for city consumption, and it seems probable that the Receipts by Lake are somewhat over reported. Probably considerable quantities of Shingles are reported as Lumber in part car loads, which, if true, tends to still further complicate the subject.

Variations from the above rates were understood to have been quite common during some portions of the year, particularly after the adoption of the agreed rates on November 25, and near the close of the year rates to the principal competitive points were made probably lower than at any time during the year, resulting in January, 1884, in a general order for reduction to the basis of 20 cents per 100 lbs. on grain to New York.

FOREIGN FREIGHT RATES.

The following shows the Rates of Freight (in cents per 100 lbs.), monthly, on Flour and Provisions charged in 1883, from Chicago to the points named, shipments being made all-rail to the seaboard, and thence by ocean steamer.
